After a long time coming, construction is winding down at the new City Hall

The activity to relocate City Hall and the emergency dispatch center out of the flood inundation area and into the downtown area has been a long time coming. The need for a new City Hall location was identified more than eight years ago in Minot's NDR Action Plan; however, it was not one of the initially funded activities. Rather, HUD advised the city to first advance the projects and programs within its approved Action Plan connected to addressing the unmet needs of vulnerable populations. After meeting these requirements, the city submitted a waiver request to HUD on November 30, 2017, and the waiver was approved by HUD in the February 19, 2019, Federal Register. In 2020, Council moved forward with purchasing the former Wells Fargo building which would centralize city offices and services downtown.

Construction activities kicked off in early 2022 and having moved forward on schedule and on budget, it appears that city staff will take occupancy of the new City Hall in late April. Month after month throughout the past year, consistent progress has been made on the building's renovation. The latest construction efforts have included the installation of terrazzo flooring and carpeting throughout the facility; and the installation of decorative millwork on the central staircase handrailing. Window and various wood and acoustical paneling installation continues, as well as ongoing electrical and mechanical work. Contractors are currently focused on completing punch list items and cleaning the renovated building to make it ready for the upcoming transition.
